Petitioning City To Buy Pacific Beach Pier

Now a new scheme comes along and Ocean Beach residents anxious for a fishing pier might be skeptical and inquire into just what kind of petition they are signing, for we are reliably informed a petition is being circulated here by a Pacific Beach resident, asking the city council to acquire the fishing pier now being built by a San Diego bank at Pacific Beach.

If this is a definite move by the bank to get rid of their interest in the pier, or if it is a move by the concessionaire to get an owner where political wires can be pulled we are not certain, but we are certain of this, that Ocean Beach people should stop any action, wherein the city should buy this pier being built at Pacific Beach.

We are told this pier when built some eleven or twelve years ago was not put up in a satisfactory manner and that the new piling has not been put in the ocean bed to a depth where it will withstand very rough weather, with the heavy pounding waves.

In case this deal goes thru for a city purchase as planned in the petition it will look very much to us like another of those political deals pulled off by an unwise council and an unscrupulous councilman of the district in question.

What do you think?

Benbough's Mayor Candidacy Advanced at Right Time

The promotion of the candidacy of Percy J. Benbough, for mayor of San Diego, could not have been announced at a more opportune time.

Our present mayor celebrated the announcement by getting on a spree, it is said, and wrecked the Lincoln auto, which was bought during the same week for him by the "dear taxpayers'.. His Honor's escapades during the little while he has been in office should spell "curtains" for him at next spring's election.

REV. LINDER TELLS WHAT HE IS THANKFUL FOR

Dr. E. O. Thayer was chairman of the day at Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon, having as guest speaker, Dr. Frank G. Linder of San Diego.

Dr. Linder's theme was Thanksgiving and he said, that when Saint Paul said "Thank God For Everything," he hardly believed that Saint Paul meant all things and everything, for certainly there were some things we could not be thankful for.

The speaker mentioned a few things that he was not thankful for, such as drought, hardships, crime, etc. However, there were many things which he said we should be thankful for, and he believed better conditions would be found by all, if we were able to overcome the result of ignorance and year.

Visiting Kiwanians were Edward S. Baxendale of the La Jolla club and McLean Wilson of east San Diego.

Mrs. I. W. Parks and Mrs. Myron Insko were guests of their husbands. Dad Bingham was a guest of James Hughes and Rev. W. S. Dunn a guest of Heber Hartvigsen.

Mr. and Mrs. Sew and Sow
OF OCEAN BEACH

Mrs. J. O. Albright welcomes the visitor within her home at 1945 Venice street, where she exhibits with friendly pride her quilts. Sewing with her is a fine art. Thousands of tiny perfect stitches spring into exquisite quilting designs beneath her busy fingers. The patterns are first originated by Mr. Albright in stencil. He further cooperates by fashioning clever sewing cabinets and other useful objects of finest wood and the skillful use of tools in his workshop. In this home—and a real mother's home it is in its atmosphere—this industrious couple in their declining years improve each shining hour.

Mrs. Alice Rhodes finds pleasure and profit these days in knitting. In her spare time she wiggles a mean knitting needle in creating lovely coats, caps, purses and afghans. The wool used comes from Maine, her native state. Some years ago she came to Ocean Beach and bought an old house at 4603 Pescadero street. Later she married Frank Rhodes, and under their clever manipulation the old house was transformed into a home of many windows, sunshine and color. Fruit trees and flowers bloomed luxuriantly as the result of careful sowing of seed in fertile ground. Within her home now are many growing plants. Mrs. Rhodes expects to start a class in knitting about January 1st, assisted by her niece. Countless stitches from busy needles will produce garments of lasting utility and comfort.

Miss Florence Cook has made attractive the gas and electric station at 5003 Niagara street by flowers and growing plants in gayly-painted pots. Five years ago she had acacia trees set out in front, which now throw green and refreshing shade on an otherwise bare thoroughfare.

Miss Kate Spani's home overlooks the world at Narragansett and Guizot streets. Within a high fence are fruit trees producing lavishly, planted but a few years ago.

Parent Teacher Ass'n

Enrollment for this course may be completed at the December meeting. Plans will be announced later through the columns of this paper.

The line officers of Point Loma chapter gave a farewell supper for their junior matron, Margaret Reinfrank, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Nelson, November 25, before her departure for Los Angeles, where she will neside premanently hereafter.

The sumptous supper was followed by a social evening by the fireside where all expressed the wish that sister Margaret would be very happy in her new home, though very much missed by her old friends of Ocean Beach.

Covers were laid for Margaret Reinfrank, guest of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sweet, Mr. and Mrs. George Kenline,. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lathrop, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Berg.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doeth good is of God: but he that doeth evil hath not seen God." These words from III John are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Lesson-Sermon denounces ancient and modern necromancy, alias mesmerism and hypnotism.

The Bible citations include this verse from Revelation, "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser or our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night."

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states, "That false claim—that ancient belief, that old serpent whose name is devil (evil), claiming that there is intelligence in matter either to benefit or to injure men—is pure delusion, the red dragon; and it is cast out by Christ, Truth, the spiritual idea, and so proved to be powerless."

THE MYSTERY OF MAN'S CONSTITUTION

Most of us today are barely conscious of any higher grade of intelligence than this thinking semi-automatic brain-mind, yet we are in a way semi-conscous of a higher intelligence from which we receive conceptions, inspirations, illuminations, comprehensions of higher things.

The discussion of the Ocean Beach Theosophical club on Thursday evening, December 6th, at 7:30 in the bungalow of the school will be on this mystery of man's constitution and will be held by Mrs. Mora Forbes. There will also be a short sanskrit lesson. All are welcome and questions are invited.

GLEANINGS OF TRUTH

Keep thy soul from growing bitter We lose more than we gain when we overlook our spiritual salvation.

What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his soul.

Man does not live by bread alone.

We bring nothing into the world, we take nothing out of it.

The joy of having is the joy of giving.

Compassion is the noblest sentiment of the human heart. Intolerance is the most devastating. Within each of us is the eternal struggle between our better and worse selves.

Human frailties, are not easily overcome.

God's mercy endureth forever.

GIRLS' LEAGUE GIVES CORRIDOR DANCE AT POINT LOMA HIGH

On Friday evening of Nov. 23 the Girls' League of Point Loma high school gave a corridor dance in the halls of the high school to raise money for the purchase of a trophy case to hold the mementos of athletic prowess already collected by the school.

Salient features of the dance were its presence in the halls instead of the auditorium at Point Loma high and the athletic connotation of the decorations and dances. The lockers were roped off. The yard lines were marked on the chandiliers by maroon and gold placards. A center rush dance and a forward pass dance served to mix the crowd of sport and dance enthusiasts that tripped the light fantastic.

The League member hostesses for the affair were Mary Shreve, league president; Mary Kearns, Karolyn Curtis, Betty Curtis, and Ella Cook. Mr. and Mrs. Swenson, Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Miss Collier, Mr. and Mrs. John Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Banks, Mr. and Mrs. Tait, and Mr. and Mrs. Farrar were the guests of the evening.

The Ocean Beach Woman's club is sponsoring an entertainment of a Christmas dance fantasy by the Terheggen dancers for the aid of Christmas basket fund. The affair will be held in the Point Loma high school auditorium, Friday evening, Dec. 14, at 8 p. m. Mrs. H. B. Tank is chairman of the evening. PRESIDENT PUSHING FORWARD SOCIAL REFORM PROGRAM—RESULTS OF ELECTION.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

WITH the election in the background, President Roosevelt is ready to push forward more rapidly his ambitious plans for what he calls "the abundant life" in this country. So he has appointed a large advisory council to aid in formulating and getting through congress his program of social reforms. The chairman is Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, who has been serving as vice chairman of the NRA consumers' advisory board. He and his colleagues, all known to be New Dealers or in close sympathy with the New Deal, are asked by Mr. Roosevelt "for advice and counsel in development of a program for unemployment insurance, old age security and adequate health care."

Frank P. Graham

Prof. Raymond Moley, chief of the original Roosevelt brain trust; Paul Kellogg, editor of the radical magazine, The Survey, and a leader in many socialistic movements, and Henry Ohl, president of the Wisconsin State Federation of Labor, a progressive radical; Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, and Walter R. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, both of whom were in large measure original sponsors of the NRA, and both of whom served as chairman of the NRA industrial advisory board; Grace Abbott, former chief of the federal children's bureau; Belle Sherwin, former president National League of Women Voters; George L. Berry, president International Printing Pressmen's union; William Green, president of A. F. of L.; Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire, and Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange.

Work on the social program already is well under way and an executive committee has laid the groundwork. Also Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor and chairman of that executive committee, has named an advisory committee of physicians and surgeons that, according to advance rumors, will report a program that will be "revolutionary almost to the point of establishing socialized medicine." This medical group is headed by Dr. Harvey Cushing of Yale whose daughter Betsey is the wife of James Roosevelt, son of the President.

Secretary Perkins announced that other committees were being organized to aid in the formation of plans for federal intervention in problems of public health, hospitalization, and dentistry.

All members of these committees and other interested citizens were invited to attend the first "national conference on economic security," to be held in Washington, lasting three days.

ANOTHER program that is being rapidly prepared by the President's advisers for action by congress has to do with the nation's natural resources, and the necessary legislation is being drafted by the national resources board. It is of utmost importance and in Washington there is a belief that it may lead to government control, and possibly government ownership, of all timber lands, oil reservoirs and coal fields, and government dominion over all existing and future water power developments on the nation's lakes and rivers.

SENATOR THOMAS and his fellow inflationists were not pleased with the President's choice of a new governor of the federal reserve board to succeed Eugene Black. He picked Marriner S. Eccles, a Utah banker, whose ideas of inflation are not at all those of Thomas, for they do not include fiat money. Mr. Eccles believes in "credit inflation"; he would control the reserve banks' purchases of government securities, issue money against these purchases and spend the new money for government bonds, thus creating an endless chain of credit arrangement. So long as this chain were maintained unbroken, the government's credit would be inexhaustible.

Marriner S. Eccles

Something like fifteen billion dollars, according to Mr. Eccles, should be spent by the government for public works and housing projects, and he thinks this vast sum can be obtained by following out his monetary plans.

ARIZONA is determined to prevent the construction of the Parker diversion dam across the Colorado river unless it gets what it considers its share of the hydro-electric power to be developed by that project. Gov. B. B. Moeur declared a "war zone" on the Arizona side of the river at the dam site and sent a detachment of National Guardsmen with rifles and machine guns to halt work there.

"It's a showdown this time," Moeur said, "we are going to get something or we aren't. And if we can't expect anything, we want to know it before this project is farther advanced."

W. P. Whitsett, chairman of the Los Angeles metropolitan water district board of directors, said he "heartily agreed" with Governor Moeur that Arizona should have one-half of the power privilege at the Parker dam.

"It is to be hoped that the federal government and the state of Arizona will be able to reach an accord enabling the construction work to proceed," he said. "The advantages which will accrue to both Arizona and California more than justify the building of Parker dam at this time."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and his fellow New Dealers had every reason to gloat over the results of the elections, for, generally speaking, their policies and acts were endorsed by the citizens of the United States by what amounted to a real landslide. The Democrats gained nine seats in the United States senate, and on incomplete returns, appeared to have just about held their present strength in the lower house.

Joseph Guffey

Outstanding among the many Democratic victories was that scored in Pennsylvania. That state has not previously sent a Democrat to the senate in a half century, but this time Joseph Guffey, the party boss, rode roughshod over Senator David A. Reed, leading adversary of the New Deal, and sent him to the discard. Two other persistent critics of the administration who were retired were Senator Simeon B. Fess of Ohio, beaten by former Gov. Vic Donahey; and Senator Arthur R. Robinson of Indiana, soundly walloped by Sherman Minton. Hatfield of West Virginia, Walcott of Connecticut, Hebert of Rhode Island, Kean of New Jersey, Goldsborough of Maryland and Patterson of Missouri, all Republican senators, must give up their seats respectively to young Rush D. Holt, Francis T. Maloney, Peter G. Gerry, A. Harry Moore, George L. Radcliffe and Harry S. Truman, all Democrats.

Upton Sinclair, the extreme radical, had the fun of scaring California out of its wits with his EPIC campaign for the governorship, and at little or no expense to himself; but the national administration had turned him down and the Republican nominee, Gov. Frank F. Merriam, won by a handsome majority.

Wisconsin remained true to the La Follette dynasty even though it had created a new "Progressive" party for its own uses. Senator Bob La Follette had been patted on the head by President Roosevelt, and John M. Callahan, the Democratic nominee for the senate, was not acceptable to the administration because he was a friend of Al Smith; so Bob came through with a big plurality over Callahan and John B. Chapple, the Republican candidate. To clinch the victory of the third party, Philip La Follette was elected governor again, defeating Gov. Albert Schmedeman, Democrat, and Howard T. Green, Republican.

Sherman Minton

There was a crumb of comfort for the Republicans in the re-election of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who has condemned parts and espoused other parts of the New Deal. One other crumb, less comforting, was afforded them in Maryland where Albert C. Ritchie was defeated in his attempt to annex a fifth consecutive term as governor. He was beaten by Harry W. Nice.

Illinois, New York and Massachusetts were among the states that were swept by the Democrats. In the first named they took five house seats from the Republicans, the defeated including the veteran Fred Britten. New Yorkers returned Dr. Royal S. Copeland to the senate and H. H. Lehman to the governorship by tremendous majorities. Senator David I. Walsh was re-elected in Massachusetts, and Jim Curley, three times mayor of Boston, was made governor.

In the main the Democratic campaign had been skillfully conducted under the leadership of Postmaster Jim Farley. A fight to oust the "ins" always is difficult, and the Republicans in their hearts had not hoped for much. They did not get even the little they had expected. For at least two years President Roosevelt is assured of full support by congress for whatever policies and experiments he may undertake, and the voters of the nation have told him to go ahead and do what he can to restore the country to prosperity.

TOM MOONEY, who has served 18 years of a life sentence for complicity in the San Francisco Preparedness day bombing in 1916, may yet win release. The United States Supreme court consented to hear at least preliminary consideration to his case, and that is a big point in his favor.

The court ordered the warden of San Quentin prison to show cause within 40 days why counsel for Mooney should not be granted leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The order of the court does not mean that it will review the case, a question that would be determined after the filing of the petition. Whether the petition even may be filed will depend, in a large measure, on the answer of the California state authorities.

CELEBRATIONS of Armistice day in the United States and the allied countries of Europe were generally marked by warnings of the dangers of another terrible war in the not distant future. At Arlington national cemetery President Roosevelt quietly laid a wreath of chrysanthemums on the grave of the Unknown Soldier while military detachments stood at attention, and then, as taps sounded, Mrs. Roosevelt stepped forward and placed a single white flower at the foot of the shrine. National Commander Belgrano of the American Legion was one of the speakers at Arlington, and called for adequate defense of the nation against both foreign foes and the forces of unrest that are attacking our institutions.

In Detroit were buried the bodies of nine members of the American expedition that was sent to Archangel, Russia, during the war. They were brought back last September and were interred on Armistice day with full military honors.

French radicals and nationalists made the day an occasion for political demonstrations that in places amounted to riots. In Paris there was grave disturbance, but the police managed to preserve the peace.

IN A cablegram to the League of Nations, Chancellor Riart of Paraguay said his government could not accept a truce in the Chaco war in return for international guarantees, as was proposed by the league. Riart insisted that an end to hostilities should come before negotiations are undertaken to solve the war and to arrange definite terms for peace. However, Paraguay accepted the principle that the conflict proper should be settled by conciliation.

The Chaco consultative committee of the league asked the secretary general to request the United States and Brazil to collaborate in ending the war.

OFFICERS and crew of the Morro Castle are held to blame for the heavy loss of life when the liner burned, in the government's report on the disaster, but no attempt is made to fix the origin of the fire that took 134 lives.

SEVEN states voted on repudiation of prohibition and only Kansas, still stoutly Republican, remained dry. The others, all turning wet, were Florida, West Virginia, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Idaho.

In Nebraska Senator George Norris succeeded in putting over his pet amendment to the state constitution providing for a small one-house legislature, and there is a belief that he will run for governor in 1936 to guide the experiment. Under the amendment, the 1935 legislature will pick a number of legislators—between 30 and 50—for its one-house successor. Annual salaries will be determined by dividing the number into $37,500.

FOR the information of those who are hazy as to what the Germanic Faith movement is all about, here are the nine commandments just issued for the neo-pagans, to replace the ten commandments of the Christian Bible:

1. Honor the deity, the World foundation.
2. Honor ancestors and grandchildren.
3. Honor the great of thy people.
4. Honor thy parents.
5. Keep yourself clean.
6. Be loyal to your people.
7. Do not steal.
8. Be truthful.
9. Help the noble.

SOVIET Russia celebrated the seventeenth anniversary of the Bolshevist revolution with a parade of the great Red army before the tomb of Lenin in Moscow, and at the same time the Comintern, or Third Internationale, issued by cable an appeal to the toilers of the world to unite in a common front against imperialist wars and Fascism.

"Japan and Germany seek to provoke war and this war can only be postponed by the union of all proletarians into a solid front for a fight against capitalism," said the message.

Asserting Fascism is in power in Germany, Austria, Italy, and Poland, the comintern branded this as a threat to the laboring masses of all countries and a menace to the Soviet union.

GASTON DOUMERGUE, utterly unable to make headway against the political schemers in the French cabinet, has resigned the premiership and returned to the retirement from which he was called last February to save the country from imminent civil war. The six Radical Socialist ministers, determined to frustrate his plan for constitutional reform, refused the premier's offer to postpone discussion of this scheme until after a regular budget was voted, provided the chamber of deputies first passed a three months' budget. Doumergue thereupon read his resignation, and at the suggestion of Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical Socialists, the entire cabinet resigned.

Gaston Doumergue

President Lebrun immediately asked Pierre Laval, foreign minister, to form another coalition government, but he refused the commission. So the difficult job was turned over to Pierre-Etienne Flandin, a left Republican who was minister of public works in the Doumergue cabinet.

The crisis aroused fear of armed conflict in Paris between the Socialists and the so-called Fascist groups, for both these parties called on their militant elements to be ready for action.

Toys for Children

Educators know that children derive the greatest pleasure from constructive toys; that a doll whose face is recognizable as a member of the human family, and whose clothes can be taken off and buttoned on, gives the greatest happiness to a small girl. The wise mother will turn to a kindergarten teacher, to an authoritative book, or she will study her own child, to discover what toys serve their purpose best. And when she goes out to select toys, she will choose them not from her own but from the child's point of view.

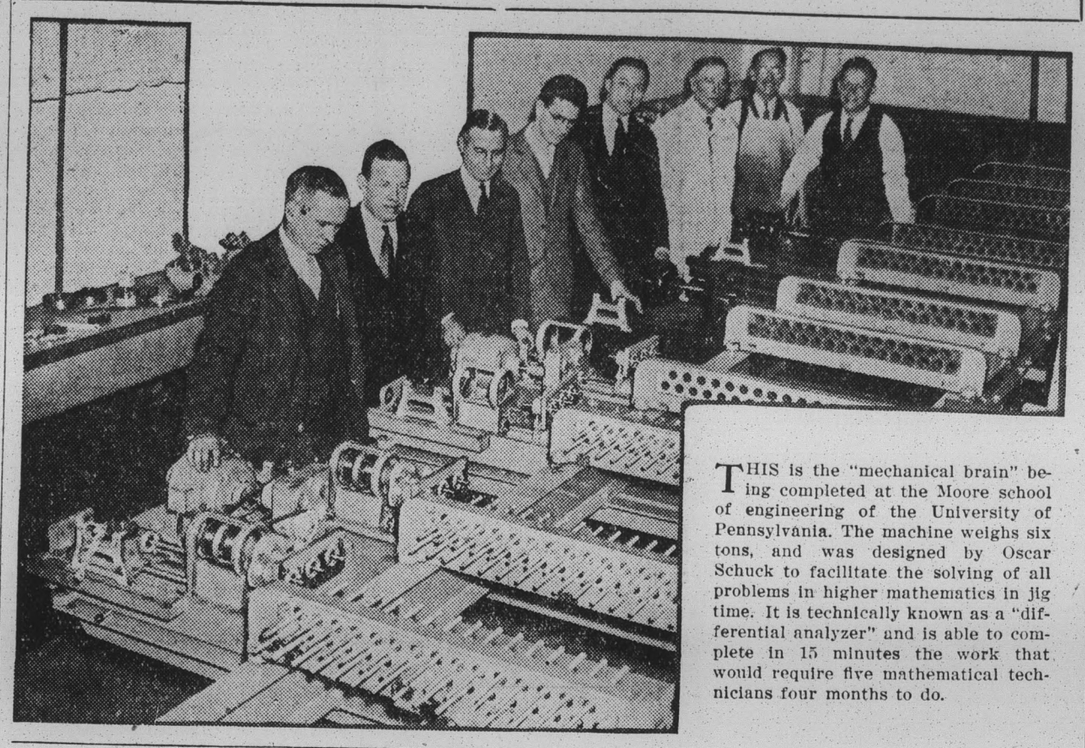
"Mechanical Brain" That Solves Problems



THIS is the "mechanical brain" being completed at the Moore school of engineering of the University of Pennsylvania. The machine weighs six tons, and was designed by Oscar Schuck to facilitate the solving of all problems in higher mathematics in jig time. It is technically known as a "differential analyzer" and is able to complete in 15 minutes the work that would require five mathematical technicians four months to do.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A LESSON IN POLITENESS

A FLOCK of modestly dressed yet rather distinguished looking feathered folks alighted in a cherry tree and began helping themselves to Farmer Brown's cherries. They were about the size of Winsome Bluebird, but did not look in the least like him, for they were dressed almost wholly in a beautiful rich, soft, grayish-brown. Across the end of each tail was a bright yellow band. On each, the forehead, chin, and a line through each eye was velvety black. Each wore a very stylish pointed cap, and on the wings of most of them were little spots of red which looked like sealing wax. From this they get the name of Waxwings. They were slim and trim and quite dandified, and in a quiet way were really beautiful.

"Don't worry," replied Jenny Wren. "I don't know anybody equal to them for roaming about. Here are most of us with families, while those gadabouts haven't even begun thinking about housekeeping yet. They certainly do just look at that performance, will you!"

There were five of the Waxwings, and they were seated side by side on a branch of the cherry tree. One of them had a plump cherry which he passed to the next one. This one passed it on to the next, and so it went to the end of the row and half way back before it was finally eaten. Peter laughed right out. "Never in my life have I seen such politeness," said he.

"Huh!" exclaimed Jenny Wren. "I don't believe it was politeness at all. I guess if you got at the truth of the matter you would find each one was stuffed so full that he thought he didn't have room for that cherry, and so passed it along."

"Well, I think that was politeness just the same," retorted Peter. "The first one might have dropped the cherry instead of passing it along."

Just then the Waxwings flew away.

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

DOING NOTHING USEFUL!

"I HAD two hundred letters waiting, a few days ago, and I deliberately went out for the afternoon and spent two hours reading poetry. This was entirely outside my schedule, and you will probably raise your hands in horror at the thought of breaking up a well-budgeted day, but I believe in the end it makes for better quality of work."

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote that not long ago in a message on the necessity of every person occasionally to learn to loaf.

"Sometimes it is extremely good for you to forget that there is anything in the world that needs to be done, and to do some particular thing that you want to do," she remarked. "Every human being needs a certain amount of time in which he can be peaceful. Peace may take the form of exercise, or reading, or any congenial occupation, but one thing which must not be connected with it is a sense of obligation to do some particular thing at some particular time."

That is a message which should be reprinted and sent to every woman, particularly every wife and mother in the country. The man or woman with a job and office hours may work very hard, they may be under great stress and strain, but usually, when they shut the door of the office behind them they know that time of peace which is indeed necessary to every human being—that time when there is nothing in particular that they have to do. When a man comes home, his time of relaxation begins. And so with the working girl who comes home to her mother, or the bachelor woman who returns to her flat. Usually, the time there has "no strings tied to it."

But the wife and mother! How aptly some one said hers is the clock that has no hands. Take a rainy Sunday. There may be no cards or games, the papers may be read. Then the family will be just "sitting around." But mother? Oh, no; that's a chance to catch up on the darning or to start that sweater she wants to knit for little Jane. She doesn't have to fold her hands to rest!

But, doesn't she! If it were not for that darning or knitting on her mind, would she not enjoy occasionally just folding her hands and "sitting around"? I say she may not even know it, but she would. I say that every woman who keeps house should keep some time free for what Mrs. Roosevelt calls a time for being peaceful—a time when she will do nothing that could possibly be called useful!

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read in the paper that a man fell from the roof of a ten-story building, into a wagon filled with soda water bottles. The newspaper claimed the man was not hurt. If this is true how do you account for it?

Truly yours,
I. DOUTIT.

Answer: That could happen, especially so it the soda water bottles were filled. In this particular case the man wasn't hurt because he fell into a wagon full of soft drinks.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am sure I met the meanest man in the world. This man, as soon as the cold weather comes around, goes down to the railroad tracks and calls out all sorts of vile names at the engineers as they pass in their engines. It seems the engineers get angry, but they can't stop their engines, so they throw pieces of coal at him, trying, of course, to hit him. That's just what this man wants. He has a bag with him and as the engineers throw the coal at him he picks it up and takes it home for his furnace. Did you ever hear of anyone meaner than that?

Truly yours,
I. GOSSIP.

Answer: That's pretty stingy; but I knew a man once who was so stingy it is unbelievable. He wanted to commit suicide and he went next door to use his neighbor's gas.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have been married little over a year. My mother is coming to live with us. My husband says the only way he will let his mother-in-law live with us is for us to buy a folding bed for her to sleep in. Can you tell me why he insists on a folding bed?

Yours truly,
I. M. FRANTIC.

Answer: He figures if his mother-in-law sleeps in a folding bed he will be able to shut her up whenever he wants to.

Huckleberry Pie

By ANNE CAMPBELL

IT'S just a huckleberry pie
Set on the window ledge to cool.
Outside the summer sun is high,
The sky a blue inverted pool.
And once again a barefoot child
Sets out to find, tin pail in hand,
The berries hiding in the wild
Far off upon that pleasant land.

It was in huckleberry time
The farm was loveliest to see . . .
I saw the morning-glories climb
Upon my window happily;
And glancing backward, as I walked
With cheerful footsteps down the lane,
It seemed to me the brown wrens mocked
That little girl so tanned and plain.

But nothing changed that sense of peace
That was my heart's blest quality.
The woodland path was a release
From irksome household tasks to me.
But now upon small things intent,
I view with an approving eye
The sweetness of home's sacrament,
Caught in a huckleberry pie.

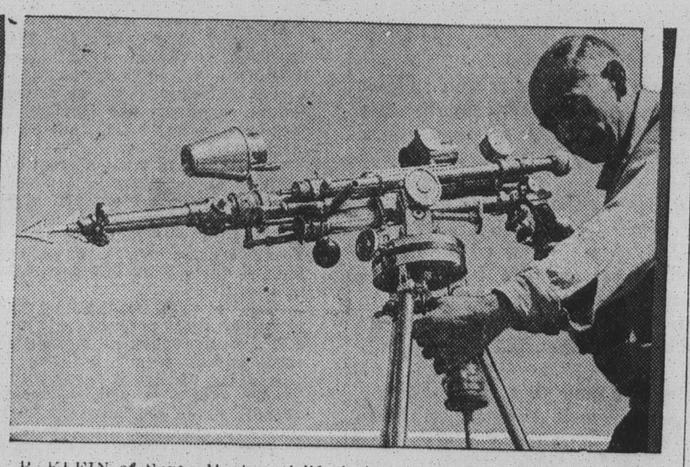
Making It Tough for the Fishes



C. R. KLEIN of Santa Monica, Calif., is here shown with his recently completed harpoon gun which will be used for shooting swordfish, alligators, sharks, etc. The gun can also be used in emergencies by life guard stations for firing life lines to distressed persons and boats. The gun, constructed of steel and bronze, is 30 inches in length and weighs but 20 pounds. It has two hand pumps, one for low and the other for high pressure. The line can be shot 150 yards with 300 pounds pressure. The sight on the gun is similar to an airplane ring sight. The gun also has a rail attachment that can be used instead of a tripod. The tapered cone is used with the line wound on it, this cone keeping the line from tangling when the harpoon is fired. It is equipped with a pistol grip and trigger for firing.

VOLCANOES IN ACTION

The volcanoes which erupted recently in the state of Vera Cruz, Mex., and in Alaska, are in that belt of volcanic activity which engirdles intermittently the huge basin of the Pacific ocean. This ring of volcanoes may be traced, on this side of the Pacific, from Cape Horn to Alaska, while on the other sides the cones are found in Japan, the East Indies, New Zealand, and other islands.

In South America, the Andes are studded with volcanoes, some of which are among the loftiest in the world. In April, 1932, a number of volcanoes roared into activity, terrifying inhabitants for 400 miles and sending dust as far away as New Zealand, 6,000 miles distant. Descabezado, Chico and Planchon in the Andes erupted again in July, and last January Llaima, in southern Chile, poured smoke six miles in the air.

Queen's Rare China

One of the smartest apartments at Buckingham palace, London, which is sometimes shown by the queen for her friends, is the china room, where the walls are lined with plates, dishes, cups and saucers from the many rare and antique porcelain services in the possession of the king and queen. These are arranged in panel formation in cases which can be unlocked for periodical washing. The value of this china is so great that the experts are locked in the china room when washing the pieces. —Philadelphia Enquirer.

SPARRING WITH JUSTICE.

If it was not for crime there would be little use for the bar of justice. The immortal Bacon said: "He that studieth revenge keepeth his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal and do well."

Deplorable as crime is, it is worse yet when you think that it most always begins with the young mind, to be lead into misery, physical and mental pain and regret. Fifty-five per cent of arrests are of persons under 30 years of age. The average of the criminal population is 23 years. The largest age group in crime in 19 years. The average age of hold-up men at Sing Sing is 19 years!

This is a sad commentary on our civilization, for it begins early in life. Justice is on the jump, working overtime to check this national enemy. But it is increasing in America and California!

The United States spends about $4,000,000,000 annually chasing, capturing, prosecuting and housing criminals. The toll of crime on private enterprise is variously estimated between $10,000,000,000 and $15,000,000,000 each year—about half the national debt. The Division of Investigation of the United States Department of Justice has on file information about the private lives of two-and-half million people, and has four-and-a-half million fingerprint cards. These come not only from our forty-eight States, but also from as many foreign countries. About 2200 cards arrive daily. It is a question of building more schools today or jails tomorrow, and there seems to be a ferce in the land to work against crime through educational lines. The CCC is one of the most effective agencies among young men for preventing causes of crime. There is imperative need of rapid and thorough building of a foundation for a more effective administration of justice. Ways for training youth in citizenship and organizing leisure are being widely adopted as means of attracting juveniles away from sources of crime and vice, which as Pope says:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated, needs but to be seen."

It is true that we are facing a grave situation, the most alarming since modern civilization, brought on by a vast national army of the idle young. Nothing is more menacing to the morals of young men than forced idleness. It is all the more perplexing because the demand for employment among young men is greater than the power to meet the demand under present conditions. This is a crisis to the nation brought on by the pressure of circumstances, and while there may be a direct outlet for the situation, through the Townsend Old Age pension plan, it is up to the people to show Congress and the President.

Wisdom and health are two important essentials to our existence. One has said that wisdom is to the soul what health is to the body. Such a comparison brings home to every individual, a lesson which few take the time to learn or even give any thought to. In order to gain wisdom and health, there must be a well balanced body and mind. Ill health undermines the body and saps the intellect of its power to reason and understand. The human structure under proper care, will endure through surprising feats of hard work and accomplish large results, but it must be kept fit with proper nourishment, exercise and rest. A strong mentality depends upon a robust body and responds with remarkable alertness if the body has a proper balance. The ignorance of the people regarding health and how to keep it, is keeping the grim reaper working over-time.

No wonder we are aroused over transportation tragedies, which show a 20 percent in deaths from accidents this year. After the appalling statistics we have awakened; a drive is now on to run down the drunk drivers, the "road hog" and the "speed maniac." An estimate is made that this year's death toll will reach 35,000 as against 31,000 last year. Of this number, 4100 victims were school children. The President has asked for "uniform highway safety laws with strict and impartial enforcement". It seems with 350,000 killed and 10,000,000 injured in 15 years, traffic accidents are shown really to be Public Enemy No. 1. While we are on the subject Public Enemy No. 1 has killed more than 26,000 persons in the United States this year and is still at large!

Political genius continues to work in its effort to divide the state into two states—Northern California and Southern California, but level headed judgment and good statesmanship will never allow such an act. That is why the recent resolution introduced in the State Assembly met its complete disproval. However the subject will continue to be studied for it is an old subject. Cutting the state in half was discussed at the first meeting of the legislature, back in 1858 but the subject seems to have gained very little favor since.

The man who is responsible for coining the term "Uncle Shylock," and who applied it to "Uncle Sam," our own United States, is Lord Rothermore of the London Daily Mail. This editor has a particular habit of trying to woo with his velvet voice, but America cannot look upon his comparison in any very complimentary degree. It is rather a slur upon our pride and does not stand for a better neighborliness between Uncle Samuel and his esteemed Johnny Bull.

We seem to look upon the real estate man as a good prophet, as a guide in economic affairs. His service well directed, under a conservative education and knowledge of conditions in state and local affairs, must fit him for giving valuable advice. He is willing to admit that his job is more than holding down a swiveled chair. He must honestly study, advise, solicit, exercise judgment and be extremely considerate when "making a deal." In considering the technical affairs, the realtor is a necessary and important citizen.

Lovely Fifi Loves to Cook

Fascinating Fifi D'Orsay prepares a plump fowl, and samples its gravy before lifting the bird to the fruit-garnished platter resting so invitingly atop the gas range in her kitchen, where she spends much of her leisure time experimenting with exciting new food combinations.

By Mabel Love

"I MAY seem radical in my view," says lovely Fifi D'Orsay, famous screen star, featured recently in "Going Hollywood", "but I see no reason why an actress should suppress her domesticity just because her job is that of entertaining the public.

"I have always taken a great deal of interest in cookery, especially the dishes which I enjoyed in my childhood days spent in Canada, and I still have many of the old family recipes which have been handed down from one generation to another.

"The French Canadians make much of food preparation, many hours being spent in making the food attractive not only to the palate, but the eye as well; for the French have a genuine respect for cookery as an art."

A fruit garnish with the roast is one of Fifi's suggestions, for she believes that many fruit combinations can be used to increase both the eye and appetite appeal of the main dish. Below are two of Fifi's recipes.

Orange Sauce
(For chicken or duck)

6 slices of orange, unpeeled
Juice of two oranges
Grated rind of 1 orange
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons sherry flavoring
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup meat gravy

Add orange juice, sherry flavoring, sugar and salt to gravy and heat. Let orange slices simmer in sauce for five minutes. Arrange slices around roast and garnish with cress.

Another favorite with Miss D'Orsay, which she serves with roast beef, chicken or sliced ham, consists of a prune and pineapple garnish.

Pineapple and Stuffed Prune Garnish

6 slices canned pineapple
6 large stewed prunes
6 blanched almonds
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons butter or meat fat
¼ cup pineapple juice

Melt butter, add sugar and saute pineapple slices until delicately brown. Add liquid and simmer until liquid is absorbed. Stuff prunes with almonds, and place one on each slice of pineapple. Arrange around roast or baked sliced ham.

HUGE BUILDING PLAN ANNOUNCED FOR EXPOSITION

Two-Score New Structures to be Erected for California Spectacle

SAN DIEGO.—A vast building program providing for the construction of more than forty new structures for the California Pacific International Exposition here next year, was announced today by Frank G. Belcher, president.

Included in the construction plans are 15 dwellings to be known as "The House of Pacific Relations," five new structures as large as many of the huge exhibit palaces already in Balboa Park, and foreign buildings in which the displays of far-away places will be exhibited.

Ground is Broken

Ground has already been broken for the "House of Pacific Relations," a group of abodes to be occupied by representatives of foreign nations participating in California's great recovery-stimulating enterprise. Designed for the promotion of international harmony, this feature is recognized in the United States and abroad as a definite contribution to international harmony.

Among the larger new buildings, plans for which are being prepared by architects, will be the Hall of Photography, in which international photographic exhibits will be displayed; the Transportation Building, in which the progress of transportation will be traced; the Community Building, in which states, counties and cities will place exhibits; an exhibit palace devoted to office appliances, the Palace of Electricity with displays depicting the miracles wrought by science, and the Woman's Palace.

Story of Progress

In these buildings and in the magnificent structures already erected in the 1,400-acre park in the heart of the city, the exhibits covering all phases of man's unfaltering progress will be displayed.

From Chicago's "A Century of Progress Exposition" will come many exhibits. Foreign nations are expected to contribute displays typical of their lands. All phases of commerce and industry will be represented in new and novel ways.

5,000,000 Are Expected

To see the countless exhibits, upwards of 5,000,000 persons are expected to come to California from all parts of the United States, assuring California of undisputed claim to its pre-eminent position as the playground of the continent in 1935.

The economic effects of the $10,000,000 pageant of achievement already are felt in Southern California, with the employment of hundreds of men and fresh payrolls. As date for the opening of the spectacle approaches, more hundreds will go to work, more money will be released into trade channels, and more tourists will throng the state which, through San Diego, invites the world next year.

Exposition Opens Two New Headquarters

SAN DIEGO.—Two branch headquarters of the California Pacific International Exposition have been opened in San Francisco and in New York, it was announced today.

Management of the Eastern office of the spectacle to be presented here beginning May 29 is in charge of J. Parker Van Zandt. Headquarters are 2545 Salmon Tower, 11W. 42nd St., New York. San Francisco offices will be in charge of David H. Larson, who is being transferred from the Los Angeles branch.

Reading Fun in Store for Boys

Here's important news for the boys of America. THE AMERICAN BOY—YOUTH'S COMPANION, the nation's quality magazine for boys has been reduced from $2.00 a year to $1.00. The three-year rate, formerly $3.50, has been reduced to $2.00.

"For a long time we have been seeking a way to reduce the cost of THE AMERICAN BOY to readers," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor. "Recently we have effected savings that make the cut possible, and we think boys will agree that the new price is big news on the reading front. We hope boys will help us to spread the good news by telling their friends."

Along with the cut in cost, the magazine's publishers are planning a magazine that will continue to set the pace in fiction, articles, and departments. The favorite characters of millions of boys will parade thru THE AMERICAN BOY in new stories. Douglas Renfrew of the Royal Canadian Mounted, Hide-rack the red-and-gold collie, Bonehead Jim Tierney, the detective, will give the reader many exciting hours in the months to come.

William Heyliger, whose true-to-life, gripping vocational stories have won him wide acclaim from parents and librarians, as well as the hearty approval of boys, is working on new stories. Staff writers are interviewing famous coaches and athletes and world-renowned explorers, to bring boys the color and fun of sports and travel.

In short, THE AMERICAN BOY, under its new price, will continue to give boys a magazine that measures up to the best standards set by adult magazines. Send your subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Michigan. Enclose your name and address and the proper amount of money, and THE AMERICAN BOY will soon be headed your way, loaded with reading thrills.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Thanksgiving" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all services held on Thanksgiving Day in Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. These words from II Corinthians 9:15 were the Golden Text: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

A Scriptural citation from II Corinthians presented Paul's words: "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:... Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God."

One of the correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, stated, "We shall obey and adore in proportion as we apprehend the divine nature and love Him understandingly, warring no more over the corporeality, but rejoicing in the affluence of our God."

What Vocation Shall My Boy Choose?

By Charles Ellison,

Principal, School of Advertising, International Correspondence Schools.

We live in a changing world. Opportunities for success in the future will differ from those in the past. A boy's wise choice of his life work may do much to determine success or failure. How shall he choose?

The Opportunity in Advertising

WIDER distribution of the products which our factories can turn out in almost unlimited quantities is generally admitted to be the chief problem of the age. With equal unanimity advertising is admitted to be one of the chief aids to wider distribution. It cuts costs by permitting mass production; it widens demand by creating new desires. There is every reason to believe advertising will offer even greater opportunities in the future than it has in the past.

What is the most important qualification which the young man must possess to succeed in advertising? Not literary ability, as many believe, but rather the ability to devise effective plans for the marketing and advertising of the product, and to analyze the product and the prospective customers' wants so as to discover how the most effective appeal can be made. This is no inborn ability. It comes as a result of close study of modern merchandising methods.

How can the young man best break into the ranks of advertising? Hundreds of firms have their advertising departments where practically all types of office workers are required. Selling of all kinds—over-the-counter, house-to-house and closing the contract for construction of an ocean liner—is closely allied to advertising. Any number of men have traveled along these and other routes to success in advertising, using every opportunity to study the methods and problems of modern merchandising while on the way.

OCTOBER BEVERAGE TAX IS $139,185.35

Sacramento, Nov. 22—Approaching winter has diminished the thirst of California beer drinkers, but wine sales are gaining and now account for almost a quarter of the total state beverage tax of two cents per gallon. Out of a tax of $139,185.35 based upon October sales of beer and wine, $29,768.99 is attributable to transactions in wine.

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

Edson R. Waite

Edwin S. Friendly, chairman of the bureau of advertising, A.N.P.A., and business manager of the New York Sun, says:

"Newspaper advertising performs a great public service. It shows people what to buy for their comfort, their convenience and their enjoyment. It shows them where to buy safely and economically.

"Newspaper advertising is one of the most trustworthy of human institutions because very few business men will spend good money to advertise merchandise that disappoints customers. Thus, misrepresentation in advertising does not pay. The merchants and the manufacturers who are prosperous today are invariably those who back up their advertising with real service and honest values.

"Advertising is not a tax on the public, although some people keep insisting that it is. Nobody in particular pays the nation's advertising bill.

"Advertising done by a merchant is the cheapest salesmanship he can use. It brings customers by hundreds or thousands to his store, so that he sells his goods in great volume and gives his patrons the benefit of prices based on large purchases.

"The manufacturer uses advertising as a mass salesman and the greater the size of his business, the lower the price to the consumer.

"Do you remember when people paid $5,000 for an automobile that was not nearly as good as the $1,000 car of today? Advertising sold cars to the millions and, because of the great demand, car makers cut the price while they added to the quality."

MARINES, NAVY CLASH FOR SERVICE FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP SUNDAY

With the service football championship at stake Sunday at Sports Field, the submarines, undefeated this season, will meet the Marines in the most exciting duel of the year. Naturally Navy is the favorite on account of their undefeated status but the Marine team can be expected to offer stubborn resistance and possibly surprise with a victory. Odds have been quoted by local betting commissioners as 6-5 with the Navy the favorite.

Playing coach Joe Bauer may be out of the game with a pair of dislocated fingers which will weaken the Marines to some extent. Coach O'Regan of the Navy squad reports his charges to be in tip top shape and ready for the battle of the year.

Reserved seats for the game are on sale at Stanley Andrews, Spaldings, Muehleisen's Sports stores and the Thearle Music Co. Sale of the seats is brisk and no reserved seats will be left by Saturday afternoon. Game time is set at 2:15 p. m.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

At the weekly Temple forum-lecture, this coming Sunday, December 2, the platform will be occupied by Boris de Zirkoff of Theosophical university. His subject will be: "Are We Civilized?" He will also answer questions from the audience.

The speaker, who has been a student of Theosophy for over 15 years, and has been associated with the International Theosophical headquarters at Point Loma since 1923, purposes to consider as to whether our present-day Occidental civilization contains within itself those elements of intellectual and spiritual nature which will enable it to pass successfully through periods of crises which are imminent.

He will try to point out what is the lasting basis of a true civilization from the theosophical standpoint, and to show that only an unshakable spiritual background of thought and aspiration can uphold for any length of time the mere material progress and attainments of a race.

It is hoped that serious questions will be forthcoming from the audience on any theosophical subject that may interest those present.

NATIONAL HOUSING PROGRAM REPORTED SUCCESSFUL

Outstanding increases in the number and value of building permits issued throughout eight western states during October vouch for the success of the National Housing program in this area, according to the November issue of the Bank of America Business Review.

Fifty-five cities in eight far western states reported building permits totaling $7,623,065 last month, an increase of $3,191,809, or 72 percent, over the preceding month, and a gain of 35.2 percent over October 1933.

Farm value of California's agricultural commodities for 1934, based on estimated yields and prices prevailing November 1, will approximate $434,$65,000, a 7.9 percent gain over 1933, according to the November issue of the Review.

The estimated 1934 total of farm value of crops and livestock is approximately $31,670,000 more than the total for 1933 and is $68,514,000 higher than in 1932. This year's total includes $4,000,000 in benefit payments from wheat and cotton reduction and the corn-hog program.

The general level of prices received by California farmers for 24 basic commodities last month was 84 percent of the 1910-1915 average which represents an increase of 25.7 precent over October 1933.

An exceptionally large increase in retail trade in California occurred during October, the Review says, and inasmuch as the major portion of the twelfth Federal Reserve district's retail business is transacted in this state, the gain was reflected for the total of western states. October retail trade in California was up 20.6 percent over October 1933.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. A clown appears, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean to the show. Chicot, an old clown, is accidently killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates available laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch broke her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After the accident to Chicot, Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help. Prue hardens herself still more against Rod when she sees in the newspaper a flashlight picture of him with Milly. Rodney is forced to go to New York for timber cutters. David goes with him to help select men from among the Rescue Mission hangers-on.

Apparently unaware of her latent hostility, he tweaked his daughter's short hair, explained that he had come to see Rod on business, that when he discovered he had gone he had planned to follow him to the city.

"But now," he looked at Prudence and twisted one end of his mustache, "I'll camp here until Rod returns."

Armstrong touched Prue's arm. "Jump into the car. You were in a hurry to get home, weren't you?"

Prudence caught Jean's hand. "Your daughter is coming to stay with me, Mr. Gerard. The visit was planned before we knew you were coming. You won't need her here, will you?"

Walter Gerard smiled. "Of course, I shall miss my dear little girl, but I wouldn't deprive her of what I know will be a pleasure. Au revoir. Don't feel badly about leaving me, Jean. I'll drop in to see you daily."

The car shot forward.

At the entrance to the red brick house, Armstrong, lifting a bag from the rumble, said in a low voice:

"If that fellow annoys you by coming here, Prue, give me a ring. I'll see that he doesn't repeat."

"My word, Jim, don't scowl so. How can you stop his coming to see his 'dear little girl'?"

"Piffle! He's lost his job, I'll bet a hat. Rod would lose his mind if he knew Walt was in the neighborhood."

"Then he mustn't know. Curious that he should appear just as Rodney left. I wonder—I wonder—" She looked up at Armstrong's spectacled eyes without seeing them.

"Do you know, Jim, something tells me that Calloway pulled the wire that brought Walter Gerard to High Ledges."

As the week traveled forward, Prudence's suspicion that Walter Gerard and Calloway were in some underground fashion allied strengthened. Why did she think it, she asked herself, as perched on a stepladder she carefully wielded a brush in her white-gloved hand.

Another splash of yellow on her blue smock. One before had trickled from her suspended brush an hour ago when she had heard a plane flying over the house. For an instant she had thought that her brother and Gerard had returned from New York; then she realized that it could not be they, they wouldn't come without the men from the Rescue mission—supposing that the men had decided to accept the offer of work.

"Miss Prue! Miss Prue." Jean, in a white apron over her green wool frock, followed her voice into the room. "Mr. Jim is here! Uncle Rod is coming tomorrow!"

'Tomorrow!" Gloved hand clutching the handle of the paint pail, Prudence perched on the top of the steps. "Tomorrow!" she repeated, as Armstrong entered carrying a long, white cardboard box. "Are they really coming tomorrow, Jim? Look at this room!"

He peered about in his short-sighted way. "It is upset, isn't it? Can't you get it straightened out before they come?"

"Straightened out! The paper isn't on."

"No hurry. You'll know why when you hear Rod's letter. That is, if you want to hear it. It came by plane—with this."

He held out the white box.

"For me?" Prudence looked at it without touching it.

"If your name is Prudence Schuyler. It is, isn't it? Take it. Come off those steps. Don't look at it as if you expected it concealed a bomb."

Prudence set the box on the table, untied strings, and removed wrappings.

"Oh-o-o! How beautiful!"

Prudence clasped her hands in ecstacy as she looked down at the long-stemmed roses in the open box. She lifted two of the lovely blossoms to her face.

"Rod certainly has said it with flowers this time," Armstrong observed gruffly.

"Said what?" Prudence demanded, and promptly wished she had not asked the question.

"Your innocence is good but not good enough, Prue. Want to hear this letter? I'm in a hurry."

"Of course I want to hear it. Jean, dear, take the roses to Jane Mack and ask her to put them in vases. Come to the shop, Jim."

Armstrong followed Prudence into the room. As she perched on the stool in front of the tool-littered bench, he frowned at the open safe.

"Do you leave that unlocked? You need a guardian. It would be easy for someone to pick up those unset jewels you told me you owned. I don't want to frighten you, but that escaped convict is still at large."

"It may ease your mind to learn that you and David and Jean—and one other, I did tell Rodney Gerard—are the only persons who know I have those unset stones."

"Four! It's four too many. There's bound to be one broadcaster in the bunch. Keep the safe locked. Is Walt Gerard still putting on the devoted father act? He has, as I suspected, lost his job. Why is he hanging round this town? I don't like his eyes. They are furtive."

"He is here on one pretext or another every day. He pretends that I am the lure—I've heard his obvious line before—but I know that I'm not. And it isn't a paternal urge which brings him, I'll wager my best bit of jade."

"Does he annoy you?"

"Don't roar. He annoys me by taking my time which I want to devote to work. I have several Christmas orders besides this necklace I'm making for Jean of these stones—and I haven't touched my tools since David left until this minute. Now, Jim, the letter."

"I'll Camp Here Until Rod Returns."

For an instant there was no sound in the room but the tick of the clock. Armstrong pushed his spectacles up on his forehead as he began to read.

"'Dear Jim—

"'Have waited before writing for something definite to report. Don't dare wire or phone for fear Calloway will get on to our plan, so am sending this by plane. Schuyler is none the worse for the activities of the last week—we've kept on the move—on the contrary, the interest and excitement quite set him up.

"'When Schuyler and I arrived at the mission, he received an ovation which set the radiator rattling in its lair. I've met individual down-and-outers, but never before have seen them en masse. The place smelled to heaven of damp wool and unwashed humans. I confess that for a minute I flinched, but not David Schuyler. He was in their midst, beaming, encouraging, but never, apparently, condemning.

"'The men quieted down after a while and David explained our plan. Then he called for volunteers to go back with us and stick—he was emphatic on sticking—until the timber was cut.

"About twenty-five lined up, and their expressions as they looked at David Schuyler tied my throat up in a hard knot. If anyone questions whether his work in the mission has paid, that bunch is the answer.

"'Send back word by the pilot if the accommodations are ready. Make it snappy. Dave and I will come by train with the—well, we can hardly call them a crew yet, gang is a better word. We don't dare let them out of our sight. If you write O. K. we'll arrive tomorrow afternoon."

Armstrong looked up. "With your brother staying at High Ledges, no need to rush the papering. Here's a message for you:

"'Tell Prue, if you see her,—that "if" is my little joke—that her special boy friends, Terry McGowan and Shance O'Shea, are in our personally conducted party. Love to the Kurious Kid.

Yours,
Rod.'"

Armstrong folded the letter. "The pilot left an hour ago with my letter telling Rod to come on with the gang. Calloway is too keen not to know of the work going on at High Ledges, he must suspect Rod's plan, but, just the same, I wish he might be providentially called out of town an hour or so before that train arrives."

Prudence shook her head. "Perhaps you'll think I have a four cylinder mind when it comes to experimenting—but—I'm afraid Rodney Gerard will be frightfully disappointed when he tries to make those men work."

"I'm not. Rod has—better say had—a lazy manner, but he has developed into a hard-hitting, daring business man. He's a dynamo when he gets his mind made up."

A picture flashed on the screen of Prue's mind: Rodney Gerard standing in the sunshine before the big barn; she could smell the scent of the hay, see his eyes deepen to indigo, hear his voice, low, controlled, declare:

"I'm not in that class you detest. I'll make you take back what you said about my being of that type. I'll make you! It will be a no-quarter battle. Get me?"

She had been on the verge of taking it back when Milly Gooch had—

"Would Jean and I complicate matters, Jim, if from a discreet distance we watched the arrival of David and his followers?"

"Not if you keep out of sight. I'll drop in this evening to report. Take it easy, Prue. Don't rush to finish that room."

When he had gone, Prudence laid her face against the crimson beauty of the roses and drew a long breath of their fragrance. Lovely things! It wasn't their fault that a man whom she disliked and distrusted had sent them. Jim Armstrong didn't know that "saying it with flowers" was a habit with Rodney Gerard.

"What will you do first, Miss Prue?"

Jean's question brought Prue's attention back to the present. With long pincers she began to poke among the colorful tourmalines.

"As there is no need to hurry about getting the living room in order, I'll put in an hour at my bench. Change of work will rest me. Bring me the stones from the safe, will you, Jean?"

"Goody, I love to look at them."

"Miss Prue!" Jane Mack appeared in the doorway. "The market man phoned. He wants eggs and wants them quick. He has a rush order, and he says, can you bring them right down to the village."

Prudence dropped the pincers and pulled off the painty smock. "Of course we can, Macky. Come on, Jean, we'll gather the eggs. Put the packets of stones in the safe, will you, Macky? Don't lock it. Leave the tourmalines on the bench. I may have time to select the colors when I return."

It was somewhat difficult to make a domestic career and an artistic career jibe, Prudence decided an hour later in her shop, as again she slipped into her smock. She had brought the paper hanger from the village. David might decide to come to the red brick house instead of going to High Ledges, she had reasoned, and it would be better to have the living room in order. She picked up the pincers and commenced to experiment with the tourmalines on a penciled design.

"This sketch isn't right. Bring my portfolio from the bookcase, will you, Jean?"

"All-righty."

Prudence poked and fitted. No combination of stones suited her. She called over her shoulder:

"Can't you find it? It ought to be on the bottom shelf."

"Where did you get this?"

"Get what?" Prudence turned. Jean was staring at the newspaper picture of Rodney Gerard and Milly Gooch.

"This. It's a picture of the same cutey circus rider I found in Uncle Rod's desk in the gun room at High Ledges. She'd written—I suppose she wrote them—some slushy words on the back. Stopped with just I o. Why didn't she finish it?"

A laugh, a hateful laugh, cut into her excited question. Jean stared at her father in the doorway; the clipping fluttered to his feet.

"So you found a picture in your uncle's desk? Prying again, my darling daughter?" He mimicked his wife's tone. "What happened to the photograph with the word love unfinished?"

Jean gulped. Her eyes appealed to Prduence who put her arm about the thin shoulders.

"Answer your father, dear."

"I—I think Mr. Calloway took it."

"Calloway! Can't you talk without gulping? Calloway has it? Jean, there are times when I'm tempted to—" He took a step toward her. As his daughter crushed her face against Prue's shoulder, he laughed.

"Don't be afraid. For a minute I saw red. I hate that man Calloway like the devil. He doesn't love your Uncle Rodney, and with that picture in his possession he can make trouble for him."

His shifting eyes rested for an instant on the tourmalines shooting rays of color as the sunlight touched them. He whistled, a long low whistle.

"Where did those come from? Did a traveling jeweler drop from the everywhere?"

Prudence held a stone to the light. "Nice color, isn't it?"

He took the pincers from her hand and held up the stone. "Nice! It's a corker. Interesting work you're doing. Do you use precious stones as well?"

Prudence nodded toward the safe. "Yes. In there I have a flawless emerald, a pigeon blood ruby, and a star sapphire with a number of diamonds. All of them, except the emerald, I bought at a bargain before the Schuyler income went down for the third time. I have more money tied up in gems than I can afford."

"Do you keep the jewels in this house?"

"Why not?"

He laid the tourmaline back on the white paper. "Why not, is right. I forgot when I asked the question that for years the residents of this village haven't locked their doors at night. Have you heard when Rod is coming back?"

"I haven't heard from your brother nor from mine, except a postcard of the Metropolitan museum with 'Feeling fine,' scrawled on it. As a letter writer David is a total loss."

"I suppose you have no idea what's being done to the old cattle barn?"

"Why not ask your brother? It is his property."

"I can wait for developments, and believe me, they'll come fast. Well, I'll get along." He glanced at the safe. "Better keep that locked. There is a convict on the loose, remember." He turned on his heel and departed.

Farming might be thrilling, but it certainly took a lot of energy and strength when one was new at it, Prudence reflected, as late in the evening she flung herself on the couch in the firelighted living room.

A clock ponderously told the hour. Her glance lingered on the crimson roses straight and perfect in the tall silver vase as she counted. Eleven! She punched the pillows under her head in a more comfortable arrangement. She ought to go to bed, but she was too dead to the world to move.

Her eyes went to the red roses as if drawn by a magnet. Feeling as she did about Rodney Gerard—hadn't Jean's disclosure about Milly Gooch's photograph crystalized her suspicions into unshakable conviction—she should have thrown them away. Lovely things. It wasn't their fault that—was it the paint which made her eyelids so heavy? Perhaps—

"Miss Prue! Miss Prue!"

A scream or a nightmare? Prudence stumbled to her feet. She had been dozing.

"Miss Prue!"

What looked to be a mammoth stick of pink and white striped candy shot down the bannister. Jean and Prue reached the threshold of the workroom together. A wobbling flashlight clutched in her bony hand revealed wild-eyed Jane Mack robed in a long white nightgown, buttoned close to throat and wrists.

Welland Canal Lock at Humberstone Is Longest

One of the locks on the Welland canal, the guard lock at Humberstone, 1,380 feet long, is the longest in the world, says the Detroit News. It is not high, however, but merely provides for adjusting the canal level to the varying level of Lake Erie. The two locks on the American side of the Sault Ste. Marie canal are 1,350 feet long and 80 feet wide, with a lift of about 22 feet. The Welland canal has seven lift locks, each 820 feet long, 80 feet wide and each with a lift of 46½ feet. The three twin locks at Thorold have a total lift of 139½ feet, which is 54½ feet greater than the Gatun locks of the Panama canal. The Panama canal has three locks at Gatun, near the Atlantic end; the Pacific end has two at Miraflores and one at Pedro Miguel, the total lift being 85 feet. The usable length of these locks is 1,000 feet and the width 110 feet; these locks are in pairs. From the engineers' standpoint the Panama lock system is the most important.

Name "United States"

Thomas Jefferson, who prepared the Declaration of Independence in 1776, was probably the first to use the name "United States of America." The colonies were definitely proclaimed to be united in a resolution referring to the "Twelve United Colonies," adopted on June 7, 1775. On September 9, 1776, it was decided that in all continental commissions and other instruments where formerly the words "United Colonies" had been used, the style should be altered to the "United States." The reason there were only 12 colonies mentioned was that Georgia had not sent delegates to the First and Second congress. The United States can be said to date from the Declaration of Independence.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Quebec Mystery

ONE morning in the spring of the year, Mrs. Caroline Poirier, of St. Canute, in the Province of Quebec, roused one of her neighbors and said with much agitation that she was unable to get into her home or rouse her husband.

She had been spending the night with a friend nearby, and said that her husband, who had been working on the repairs to a church at St. Jerome, nine miles distant, was expected home some time the previous evening.

The police were summoned, the door broken in and the husband found lying on the floor dead.

His body bore three knife wounds, and it was quite evident that there had been a life-and-death struggle.

But beyond the disordered appearance of the room there were no clues to indicate who the culprit might have been.

The strange part of it was that nothing had been taken from the house, so that the murder could not have been for the purpose of theft.

Mrs. Poirier was naturally distracted, and went about the work of settling up the estate like a woman in a trance.

The man, who had led a dissipated life, died practically penniless, but he did leave an insurance policy of $2,000 in favor of his wife.

Isidore Poirier had been a contractor and builder in a small way, and he had married Cordelia Viau, the handsome daughter of a farmer, after a whirlwind wooing.

They had no children, but for some years after their marriage they lived very happily.

At the end of that time the woman seems to have conceived an aversion for her husband.

The reason for this, according to one of the commentators on the affair, is that she was a masterful woman and he was a man of "very common mold."

The gossips had it that she was enamored of another man, one Samuel Parslow, a carpenter who worked for her husband.

At all events they were seen together very much, and he paid her marked attention.

Indeed, on the night when the murder had occurred the two were together.

But that in itself did not necessarily connect either of them with the crime.

Mrs. Poirier was the organist of the village church, while Parslow was a member of the choir.

That fact might well have explained their frequent meetings.

In the meantime, the authorities were working hard to trace the movements of the dead man prior to the murder.

It was ascertained that he had been working that very day at St. Jerome.

The people of the village informed them that he had left there in a carriage, saying that he was going home.

Other persons living on the road between the two towns testified that they had seen him pass with the team.

One of them said that a woman accompanied him.

Unfortunately, this person was not able to give a very good description of the woman.

At this stage of the investigation the agent of the insurance company which had insured the victim appeared to say that Mrs. Poirier had personally taken out the insurance, had carried on all of the correspondence, and was particularly anxious at the time to be sure that she would get the money, no matter what might have been the cause of death.

The authorities determined to take the bull by the horns, and both Mrs. Poirier and Parslow were arrested. They were placed in different cells, and each told a story that conflicted with the other.

The evidence was circumstantial, but it was shown that the woman had gone to St. Jerome and had brought her husband home on the night the tragedy was supposed to have occurred.

Both were found guilty, and sentence of death was at once pronounced.

In spite of the fact that the woman had been shown in anything but a favorable light petitions were numerously signed and presented to the governor general urging him to show clemency to the female convict.

He declined to interfere, saying that the law must be permitted to take its course.

When the noose was prepared Samuel Parslow was so limp that he had to be literally carried to the platform.

Not so the masterful woman.

She walked up the steps with a firm tread, and as she reached the executioner, exclaimed:

"Be quick; that is all I ask."

Air's Composition

The colorless gas which we call the air or atmosphere is a mixture of several gases, about 77.08 per cent being nitrogen, 20.75 per cent oxygen, 0.95 per cent argon, 0.003 per cent carbonic acid gas, 0.001 per cent hydrogen and water vapor, averaging 1.20 per cent. It also contains minute quantities of the rare gases, helium, krypton, neon, niton and xenon. A cubic foot of air under average conditions weighs about .08 pound, or an ounce and a quarter.

United States Leads With Big Telescopes

Work is now in progress at Newcastle on a new 36-inch telescope for Greenwich observatory.

This telescope, it is stated, will be the biggest in use in Britain, but it is much smaller than some of those elsewhere.

In this respect North America leads the world. With the completion recently of the new 69-inch telescope for the Perkins observatory in Delaware, it now has the world's three largest telescopes.

The biggest of all is the 100-inch instrument at the Mount Wilson observatory in California, and the second biggest is 72 inches at the Dominion Astronomical observatory, Victoria, B. C., Canada.

Britain had the earliest of the really big telescopes, a 60-inch specimen, made in 1842. It has now been dismounted, and is at the Science museum at Kensington. It is unlikely that England will have any more telescopes of this size—climatic conditions aren't good enough to justify the expense of making them for a British observatory.—London Answers.

With Due Respect

He was a Chinese, and had been invited to dine at little Cuthbert's home.

His mother was anxious that their guest should not be made uncomfortable by the boy's curiosity, so she took him aside and explained all about the yellow skin and almond eyes of the Mongolians; she even showed him pictures of Chinese. More than anything else she impressed upon Cuthbert that the visitor was his father's friend, and to be treated with every respect.

When the celestial arrived, Cuthbert tried hard not to stare or look curious, but at last he cried: "I say, mummy, if he wasn't our friend, wouldn't he be a funny looking man?"

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's constipated bowels until nature restores their regularity.

HIS LUCKY DAY

The master builder observed a workman, pipe in mouth, leaning against the wall of the house they were constructing.

The master promptly gave the man a week's wages and discharged him.

Meeting the foreman later he told him what he had done and not to expect him the next day.

"That's all right," said the foreman; "I don't expect him till the day after. He works for the brick company and they only deliver every other day."—Smith's Weekly.

"Why do you regard Einstein the most able of scientists?"

"He stopped all argument," answered Miss Cayenne, "by announcing at the outset that he was the only person who would understand the things he was going to talk about."

Makes Impression

PATTERN 9040

This frock has been designed upon the principle that one should always leave a good impression behind one. Look at the little sketch of the lady walking away. Hasn't she saved the prettiest part of her frock to show us last? See how clearly the ends of the combination sleeves and yoke knot at the neck! And don't you like the bow at the waistline? It is a divine little frock in plaid or flowered fabric, but the woman who never wears a fancy fabric can make it up in a plain one and be delighted with it. And the making is surprisingly easy.

Pattern 9040 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

"WELL, if there isn't Jean Ellory!" Jean had been an old sweetheart of Salina's and she had not seen him for years; but she would know him in a million, for she had always loved him. He was busy cutting fancy figures on the ice. She stood watching him, her heart skipping beats as she did so.

The ice had been especially prepared for the Christmas holidays and Salina, in her pretty white wool sports outfit was gliding along, swan-like, still watching Jean Ellory out of the corner of her eye.

He must have felt the strong contact of her thought for suddenly he looked in her direction, but she quickly turned the other way. Then he skated more fiercely than ever, cutting a huge letter "S." She skated about pretending not to notice, but when he started off toward the far end of the lagoon she glided over to where he had cut the figures. There was the old-fashioned letter "S" and another and still another. There were "S's" all over. How she wondered if they represented the regular ice-cutter's "S" or if she really dared hope that they might by any chance stand for "Salina."

The snow was becoming heavier and more cumbersome and she noticed that most of the skaters had already left for home and celebrations.

All the way homeward she was thinking about Jean Ellory and stopping at intervals to trace his name in the snow. She must have written it a dozen times or more. The gifts she had been expecting for Christmas suddenly appeared insignificant and useless in comparison to the one vital gift—the love of Jean.

Only with a mighty struggle was Salina endeavoring to join in the Christmas celebrations, for her heart was nearly breaking.

"What is the matter, Salina?" questioned mother, as Salina almost choked with the lump in her throat.

"Nothing, Mother dear, only the Christmas spirit," answered Salina, bravely.

At this very moment Jean was hurrying home whistling merrily, his skates swinging over his shoulders. Suddenly he stopped short at seeing his own name displayed all over the snow, here, there and everywhere. "What on earth could that mean?" It was beautifully lettered and in a girl's handwriting!

Jean, stooping, carefully noted the letters in their every detail. He was determined to learn who the girl could be, who had so thought of him on Christmas eve that she had scrolled his name all over the snow.

Jean, quickening his pace, reached home, luckily before the celebrations had begun and skipped up the staircase two steps at a time to his own room. Most excitedly he dug through his belongings in search of a box of old valentines from school days. It was missing! Where could it be?

"Mother, have you seen my valentines?" shouted Jean.

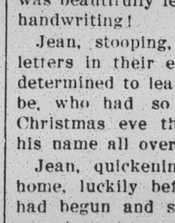
"What on earth do you want with valentines on Christmas, Jean?"

"They are decorating the walls of my room and have been, for some time, my dear brother!" taunted Clara-Bell.

The next moment Jean was tearing down the valentines regardless of his sister's protestations and began frantically examining their contents, still leaving mother and sister stupefied.

"Here it is! I knew it! This is the one!"

Crushed in the hand of Jean was a small red, lace-trimmed heart with the words, "To Jean, from Salina." 'Twas an exact duplicate of the letters in the snow. Now he knew! Dear old Salina! His childhood sweetheart!



The doorbell at Salina's rang with a loud peal right in the midst of the Christmas celebration.

"Who could be calling on Christmas eve?" they all wondered.

"You had better go, Salina," said Mother, sweetly.

Salina went, brushing aside a tear, as she did so.

She opened the door, as if in a dream scene. She had apparently lost all sense of reality for the moment.

"Salina!" said Jean.

"Jean, dear," replied Salina. The "dear" just slipping out from her heart before she knew it.

"My name in the snow," said Jean.

"The letter 'S,'" whispered Salina.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted the whole family.
